Excerpts from Dodd Gastons "Seven Days at the World's Fair"

It is not only quite impossible but ridiculous for one person to tell another what he should see. In this connection there is only one piece of advice worth giving. Do not attempt to see the fair seriously with a party. It would take a hundred years and would be very unsatisfactory then. I set out with a party of bully fellows to see the show. We were all intimate friends and our general tastes were congenial. But we did nothing except try to decide what we should do next. The things I wanted to linger over seemed not to interest the others. I stood on one foot and chafed with impatience while they wasted time, as it seemed to me, on things which I would not have opened the back door to look at. You can share your room, your meals, your joys and your sorrows with a friend, but you can't do the fair with him with any degree of satisfaction to either.

Kansas does not show up as it should in the Agricultural building. California, Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma, the Dakotas and half a dozen other states overshadow it. I do not know where the blame lies, but it is probably due to the fact that the other states had more money to spend. Little old Oklahoma makes a far better showing and there is always an Oklahoma "barker" on duty in the exhibit. Nobody in particular seemed to have charge of the Kansas exhibit when I visited the building. The corn Indian and steer, the notable things in the Kansas exhibit, are so high that half the crowd misses them. The foreigner visiting the Fair must get the idea that California is about the whole thing. Where other states use yards of floor space for their exhibit California literally uses acres. Everything else in the Agricultural and Horticultural building seems inconsequential when compared to California.

The real features of the Filipino show are the native villages. I think there are seven of them altogether, but one needs to see only two or three of them at most. The primitive type of the Filipino is very much the same no matter what his tribal appellation. One finds the Viscayans strangely like the Moros and the Moros only another sort of Igorrotes. The Igorrote village is the largest and most interesting of all. Nothing that has been said about the Igorrotes has been exaggerated. The Igorrote, when he dresses in the morning, puts on a pleasant smile and lights a cigar. If he is very highly civilized he occasionally wears a vest to dinner, but this is considered more or less of an affection by his fellows.

My advice to people who have yet to go to St. Louis is to leave the Pike until the last thing and if you fail to "do" it at all you will not have missed much. With four or five exceptions the Pike shows are not worth the time it takes to see them. I came home with a pocket full of passes to Pike shows which I did not use and had no desire to use. If there were nothing else to see the Pike would be mildly diverting, but if your time in St. Louis is limited "cut" the Pike. The free open air show on the Pike is well worth seeing. A jog once a day down Pike street is time well spent and it costs nothing save a little legwork. There are all kinds of peoples and all types of humanity. But nearly all the things on the Pike worth seeing are on the outside. I went into a number of places where an admission fee of 25 to 50 cents was charged and all I found on the inside was opportunity to eat and drink at a fancy price and a chance to buy souvenirs made in Rahway, N. J., or Montpelier, Vt., at an exorbitant figure.

I lived comfortably, almost luxuriously, at the fair for $2.50 a day. Had I been hard put for money, or had there been any necessity for scrimping, I could have turned the trick for $1.50. I had a well furnished room in a modern flat in a good neighborhood ten minutes ride from the fair for which I paid a dollar a day.

Very few colored people, comparatively speaking, are attending the Fair. In the seven or eight days I spent on the grounds I saw not to exceed twenty-five aside from those who are employed in some capacity. While great crowds attend the fair every day, with few exceptions, nobody is making money. The most the Fair management expects to do is pay off the government loan of four and a half million dollars. Expect for the salvage, the balance of the fifty million dollars invested will be clear loss.

"Kansas has $100,000,000 in the bank," says a dispatch. Democrats are making no claims in Kansas this year.

The fact that every vote in Congress against pension legislation has been cast by a Democrat completely discounts Judge Parker's promise of liberal treatment by his party of the men whose claim on the gratitude and bounty of the Nation can never be adequately paid.

If President Roosevelt's formal letter of acceptance was a masterly example of downright honesty in stating principles, direct force in meeting issues and unhesitating candor in making definite and unescapable pledges. Mr. Parker, in his formal letter of acceptance, surpasses all the previous performances at dodging, twisting, squirming and backing and filling on the great questions which are before the American people.

In acceding to the request of the Interparliamentary Union that he invite the nations to a second Hague conference. Pres. Roosevelt has taken a step worthy of all praise. It may be impossible to reassemble the Peace Congress soon—Russia and Japan could scarcely send representatives at present—and the unsettled questions may not be disposed of even when the delegates do find themselves at The Hague; but the President has, at any rate, shown his hearty good will, and, by so much, officially committed the United States to disapproval of war.

The War

The Japs and Russians have been fighting almost night and day for the past week. Most of the dispatches seem to indicate that the Japs have the better of the affair, yet the later dispatches claim that Kuropatkin is making a bold stand. Some indicate that he has assumed the defensive. The chances are, however, that when the thing comes to a focus, old Kuro will be found on the run as usual with the Japs whacking away at his heels. To a man up a tree it looks like this war may be drawn out for a year or more yet but that the Japs will finally win out. It is all guess work however, and a fellow usually guesses it the way he wants to see it go.

A nation's diplomatic strength is measured by the size of its navy.

Taggart knows the game well enough to understand that the Democratic prospects have already been thrown into the discard.

Judge Parker puts it, in effect, that the Democrats might have done a lot of things if the Republicans had not done them first.

The record of the Democratic party on pension matters is the best promise of how veterans and their families would fare under Democratic rule.

It is thought that John Sharp Williams is helping Judge Parker to prepare an expurgated edition of the Constitution, to be used as a campaign document in the South.

Democrats are clamoring for economy. Their record, when in power, was one of extravagance in the issue of bonds to save the Nation's credit, in times of profound peace.

It is surprising that the Democrats are not pushing Adlai Stevenson more to the front as a spellbinder. He has a record for surrounding both sides of a question, now a strong Democratic need.

It is difficult to understand how the first voter should have any hesitancy in choosing between the uncertainties of the Democracy and the sure and patriotic leadership of the Republican party.

It has been settled that in the event of Roosevelt's election John Hay will remain in the Cabinet. And they have been trying so hard to scare him out of it by predictions of international complications.

In the second Cleveland administration their farmers could not sell their products because the idle wage-worker had no money to buy. The savings bank deposits were $1,748,000,000 in 1894 but now are $3,000,000,000. The savings bank deposits in New York State increased $55,000,000 from June 30, 1903, to June 30, 1904. There are more savings bank deposits in New York and New England than there were in the whole country in 1894. If protection is "a robbery," as the democratic platform says, the goods are found on the people.

Truth bids us say that there is little more spunk in Judge Parker's letter of acceptance than in any preceding document of his composition since the campaign begun. A little more, but not much. It is easier to read than its predecessors, because Mr. Parker himself or some useful friend, has edited away the overabundance of qualifying phrases and modifying words with which the excellent gentleman has been accustomed in his political manifestoes to ballast both sides so impartially that when you get to the end of one of his complicated sentences you do not know whether tweedledum or tweedledee has the plurality.—New York Sun.

Democrats have a very strong passion for free things, including free trade, free silver and free soup.

We may look for subterranean methods hereafter in the Democratic campaign. Gorman is a politician of the mole species.

Grover Cleveland might be called as a witness to prove that the Democratic party does not keep faith on its tariff pledges.

"Our party now has the courage of its convictions," says Bourke Cockran. The party is still shy, however, on convictions.

The merchant in the manufacturing town is not going to vote for a repetition of the times of 1893 and Democratic tariff tinkering.

The Treasury deficit the Democrats have been talking about so much has disappeared. It lasted about as long as the usual Democratic issue.

Judge Parker now believes that he is running for the Presidency. He will discover on the night of Nov. 8 that he has only been marking time.

Judge Parker would have a better chance of winning if it were not for his friends. It is hard for a man to win a race with somebody standing on his coat-tail.

The West is singing the song of good crops, good markets and good wages. It is unnecessary to say that the Democrats are not expecting anything from the West.

Do You Want to Yawn.
Feel cold shiverings, aching in the bones, lack of energy, headache, and great depression? These symptoms may be followed by violent headache, high fever, extreme nervousness, a condition known as malaria. Herbine cures it. Take it before the disease gets a fair hold, though it will work a cure in any stage. J. A. Hopkins, Manchester, Kan., writes: "I have used your great medicine, Herbine, for several years. There is nothing better for malaria, chills and fever, headache, biliousness, and for a blood-purifying tonic, there is nothing as good." 50c at G. P. Wilder.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

No one who is acquainted with its great qualities can be surprised at the great popularity of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It not only cures colds and grip effectually and permanently, but prevents these diseases from resulting in pneumonia. It is also a certain cure for croup. Whooping cough is not dangerous when this remedy is given. It contains no opium or harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. It is also pleasant to take. When all of these facts are taken into consideration it is not surprising that people in foreign lands, as well as at home, esteem this remedy very highly and very few are willing to take any other after having once used it. For sale by all drug gists.

Cause of Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, or tetanus, is caused by a bacillus or germ which exists plentifully in street dirt. It is inactive so long as exposed to the air but when carried beneath the skin, as in the wounds caused by percussion caps or by rusty nails, and when the air is excluded the germ is roused to activity and produces the most virulent poison known. These germs may be destroyed and all danger of lockjaw avoided by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely as soon as the injury is received. Pain Balm is an antiseptic such injuries to heal without maturation and in one third the time required by the usual treatment. It is for sale by all druggists.
